UNAWARE.

I would not have you so kindly
Thus early in friendship's year,
A little too gently, blindly,
You let me near.

So long as my voice is duly
Calm as a friend's should be,
In my eyes the hunger unruly
You will not see.

The eyes that you lift so brightly,
Frankly, to welcome mine
You bend them again as lightly
And note no sign.

I had rather your pale cheek reddened
With the flush of an angry pride,
That a look with disliking deadened
My gaze defied.

If so in the spring's full season
Your glance should soften and fall,
When, reckless with fever's unreason,
I tell you all.

—The Late H. C. Bunner in Scribner's Magazine.

MY PATIENT.

It was about 5 o'clock one Saturday afternoon, a time when the east end doctor sometimes, but not always, gets a few minutes' rest.

The inner door was pushed slowly open, and the head of a thorough little gutter urchin appeared. He was a capital specimen of the London "gamin"—naked feet and legs up to the knee, ragged trousers, a thin cotton shirt, open at the chest, a ragged coat and no hat. He was grewsomely dirty, but his thin, almost delicate fingers told me at once that he was a pickpocket.

"I want Dr. Prebble," he said in a hoarse voice.

"Well, you've got him," I answered.

"Bill's fell down and hurt 'isself," he said slowly.

"Who is Bill?" I asked.

A shade of disappointment passed over his face. I had evidently fallen in his opinion. My not knowing Bill proved conclusively that I had not mixed in the choicest society.

"'E's our lodger," he said cautiously, "an I ain't a-goin to tell you no more."

"Why didn't he go to a hospital?"

"I dunno," he said. "'E was at work, and fell off of somefing. So 'e come 'ome. That's all."

Luckily a medical man is safe in almost any neighborhood. Moreover, I was well known, and as I went along I heard the gossips saying:

"There goes the doctor. He's come to see after Bill."

Clearly Bill was a celebrity.

At last my guide stopped at a house, and, nodding to a woman who stepped on one side to let us enter, said, "It's all right, old gal."

I found out subsequently that the "old gal" addressed was the young gentleman's mother. Respect for parents is not a leading feature in that neighborhood.

Without wasting a minute I knelt on the floor to examine Bill's injuries. I found they were serious—a dislocated shoulder, two ribs broken and internal injuries, which might prove more serious still.

On his fingers were the marks of oakum picking, which showed that Bill was an ex-jailbird, and in the corner of the room stood a suspicious looking bag, out of which peered a jimmy. It was then fairly safe to assume that Bill had met with an accident while engaged in his professional duties as a housebreaker. He was educated. One could see that at once by the development of his brow. In his face, too, there were some lingering traces of refinement.

I looked up at the boy, who was watching me carefully, and, I have no doubt, reading my thoughts.

"You ain't a-goin to tell no tales, gov'nor?"

"My business is to cure him if I can," I said briefly. "Now, I want your help."

With some difficulty I managed to get his shoulder back into position. Then I set his ribs. Beyond that I could do nothing until he recovered sufficiently to answer a few questions.

It was necessary to find a nurse. The man ought to have been in a hospital, but it was impossible to move him. Indeed, it was almost a miracle that he had ever reached home in such a mangled condition.

Not far from my dispensary there was a nursing institution, supported by some ladies, who devoted their time and money to nursing the poor in their own houses. The matron was a splendid woman, who never stopped to inquire whether a case was deserving. The fact that a man or woman was ill was all that she cared about. Their crimes and shortcomings she left to other people.

Miss Shepherd listened to my story with her usual sympathy.

"There is only one young lady I can send," she said thoughtfully, "and she has not had much experience. However, we must do something. I'll introduce her to you and see what you think."

It is a curious thing that on first seeing that girl she did not strike me as at all good looking. Since then I have learned to know her well, and I think her one of the most beautiful women in the world.

In these years of work among the poorest of the poor I met no woman of such a radiant, glorious nature as the pale faced girl whom I saw for the first time that Saturday evening.

To my great disappointment on reaching the sickroom her composure quite gave way. I had hoped she would be strong enough to maintain her self control, instead of which she trembled and turned deadly white, looking almost inclined to burst into tears.

"Come, come, Miss Clinton!" I said. "You must get accustomed to scenes of distress. If you break down, you won't be able to help me at all."

"I beg your pardon, Dr. Prebble," she stammered hastily. "It was only the first shock. Everything is so horrible. You may depend on my doing what you require."

Then I explained the case to her carefully and taught her the duties of a nurse as well as I could in such a short time.

Miss Clinton must have nursed her patient better than I expected she would, for he passed a fairly good night, and when I saw him at 11 o'clock on Sunday morning the fever had abated somewhat, leaving him, of course, very weak and in a more or less precarious condition.

The nurse whom Miss Shepherd had sent to take charge of the case during the day was a highly experienced woman, whom I knew well.

"It's a bad case, doctor," she said. "Will you pull him through?"

"I can't say yet," I answered. "Ask me tomorrow morning. What time did you relieve Miss Clinton?"

"At 8 o'clock. She didn't like to go away, but I insisted on her having a rest. I can't help thinking that Miss Clinton takes something of a personal interest in the case," said the day nurse. "Have you read the morning's paper?"

"Not yet. Is there anything in it?"

She produced a Sunday paper and pointed to a paragraph headed "Daring Attempted Burglary." The burglars had entered a window on the first floor by means of a ladder, but they were disturbed at their work and had been forced to escape hurriedly, leaving the booty behind them. It struck me at once that in all probability Bill was one of the burglars. In making his escape he had no doubt fallen from the ladder.

But there was another feature in the case which was more striking still. The owner of the house which had been entered was named Clinton.

On first seeing the sick man Miss Clinton had lost her composure to an extent that surprised me. What was the link that bound these three people together—a wealthy city merchant, a young lady devoting herself to work among the poor and a broken down ex-convict lying sick, perhaps dying, in an east end slum?

On returning to his bedside at 5 o'clock in the afternoon I found Miss Clinton was again on duty. She was quite calm and self possessed and without a trace of nervous excitement.

The progress which had been shown in the morning was all lost and a change had set in for the worse. A brief examination told me that he was in a state of collapse, which was the one thing I dreaded. Within a few hours he would be a dead man.

"When will it be?" she said in a steady voice.

"Before midnight," I answered. "Would you like me to stay with you, or shall I ask Miss Shepherd to send somebody in your place?"

"I will watch alone."

"Are you a relative of the Mr. Clinton whose house was entered Saturday morning?" I asked, leading her to the window.

"He is my uncle," she said.

"And who is Bill?" I asked.

"He is my brother."

She spoke in the same steady voice.

"He went wrong as a boy of 19," she continued. "My uncle might have saved him, but refused to. That is why I have taken up nursing. I knew he had sunk, but I didn't know he had come to this. I hoped I might find him if I mixed with the poor."

In one little matter I was able to save her some pain.

At the door I met an officer in plain clothes whom I knew by sight.

"I'm after a man for the Forest Gate robbery. I hear he is in this house."

"He is up stairs," I said, "but you are too late. He is dying." The detective hesitated.

"I give you my word as a physician that he will be dead before midnight. If you arrest him, he will certainly die on the road to the station. Do you know his real name?" I asked.

The detective looked at me sharply.

"No; what is it?"

"William Clinton, a nephew of the man he tried to rob. At the present moment his sister is watching by his bed."

The officer made a note of it in his book.

"I shall have to keep an eye on him, doctor," he said kindly, "but you may depend I sha'n't interfere, for the sake of the young lady."

And so William Clinton passed through the gate of life in peace.—Answers.

The Way to Teach.

Any method which is productive of lasting and beneficial results is a good method. "Reasoning," says Locke, "is the faculty of deducing unknown truths from principles already familiar."

The principal difficulty with teachers today is the same as Horace Mann pointed out years ago, "We do too much telling and too little teaching." Professor Dewey says of present day methods, "They succeed in crushing out all spontaneous interest in the subject itself even if they do not all but destroy a capacity for it."

It is this spontaneous interest that must be awakened and kept alive. The teacher must be spontaneous, enthusiastic, very much alive. Such a teacher never uses a textbook during a recitation, is ready and apt in his illustrations, pleasing in manner of presentation, able to present the same thing in different ways, never resorts to sarcasm as a means of correction or to cover up his own lack of information, gets his class where the members are not afraid to try, sits little during recitation, possibly not at all, censures sparingly, praises much. But this kind of teaching takes time for careful preparation, and much hard work is required.—Journal of Pedagogy.

For a Sty In the Eye.

When you feel that pricking pain and see the fatal little spot of red on the eyelid which surely foretells the coming of a sty, put into a small bag a teaspoonful of black tea, on which pour enough boiling water to moisten. As soon as cool enough put it on the eye and let it remain until morning. The sty will in all probability be gone. If not, one more application will be certain to remove it.—Good Housekeeping.

CHRISTMAS JOY TO ALL.

Now all the best that is in us is at high tide. The heart is open with cheer, the eyes are asparkle with mirth. On the road passers-by sing out some merry call. We look at each other and know that the same leaven of hope and joy is at work in all of us. Christmas has come; the great breast of humanity swells, and every thought quickens to the time.

How pregnant with good will is this tide of the year! Now all the vines are bare, the fields are lean, the roadsides are no longer flowery pastures of delight. Nevertheless this season has virtue and potency of such kind that the heart is warmer than when the "sap creeps up and the blossoms swell," and all the earth is dressed in carnival attire. Now the heart leaps free and singeth songs to itself.

"Joy comes, grief goes, we knew not how;
Everything is happy now."

There is a genius in the air at Christmas time that stirs the heart to giving. It had its birth in the birth of Christ, the gift of God to men. It is in remembrance of this unmeasured and perfect gift that we give as we may. If I have poverty as my elbow companion I will not lament. I will open the treasures of cheer. I will give freely of whatever "sweetness and light" my bosom holds, to the rich as well as the poor. I will not sigh that I have so little to give, others so much, until I am certain I have given all that I can give. And as I look into and estimate my resources I know that I shall find that my best and fullest givings have not left me empty. On the contrary, I find that each time I hail my friends and give them of my good cheer, new cheer and new joy are mine—I have greater capacity for giving.

It is a subtle genius that does this. It is all comprehensive. Its lines can not be drawn in the stretches of space, nor are its dominions of time. It is essentially divine and so it has quickening power. It is stable and can right its own course. No seas are too wide for it, no mountains too high. Its home is in the heart, it realizes itself in giving and it giveth without measure. It is love.

THE SONOMA ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY.

Sonoma is to have light. At a meeting of the stockholders of the proposed Electric Light Company, held on Saturday evening last, it was decided to go ahead and incorporate with a capital stock of $10,000. Articles of incorporation will be filed with the Secretary of State next week. The new corporation will be known as "The Sonoma Electric Light Company." The number of shares will be two hundred of the par value of $50 each. Most of the stock has been subscribed for. The principal stockholders are F. T. Duhring, C. F. Leddig, Robt. Hall, H. H. Granice, C. Aguillon, Julius Fochetti, S. Giucci, F. Clewe and S. Schocken.

The services of a competent consulting engineer will be engaged as soon as the incorporation papers are filed, and the company will get right down to business, construct the works and have the plant in operation within three months after the New Year.

COLD WEATHER.

The weather the past week has been the coldest experienced in this valley for many years. The thermometer has fallen as low as 22 degrees above zero and what with the ground covered with heavy white frost and pools of water being covered over with a coating of ice, the valley has presented a wintry aspect during the early morning hours. The cold snap has retarded the growth of the young grain which had just commenced to get a good start and should it continue much longer green feed will also be damaged more or less. A warm rain, however, within the next few days, will offset the frosty mornings of the past six days.

No Klondyke needed to secure a guaranteed sewing machine. Particulars at Clewe's. *

TRILBY.

Schellville, Dec. 23, 1897.

Surprise Party.

On Thursday of last week the children and a number of friends and patrons of Dunbar School visited Kenwood and took possession of the home of Mrs. M. E. White, completely taking the lady by surprise. Vocal and instrumental music and recitations were the order of the afternoon and a very pleasant time was had by the participants. Miss White, the teacher of the Dunbar School, was greatly surprised when Miss Zelma Brand stepped forward and on behalf of the scholars presented her with a gold pen and penholder. In presenting the token Miss Brand said: "Dear teacher, the pupils of the Dunbar School feeling very grateful to you for your many kindnesses and wishing to express in some manner their appreciation of your efforts, have requested me in their behalf to present you this gold pen and pen-holder as a slight token of their esteem. Please accept it as coming from those who with grateful hearts will ever remember you as a sincere friend and faithful teacher."

After the presentation a table was spread and an excellent lunch served, to which all did ample justice. The following were those present: Mrs. L. Quein, Miss Dora Quein, Miss Annie Quein, Percy Quein, Mrs. J. W. Brand, Miss Zelma Brand, Miss S. Brand, Miss Hattie Brand, P. E. Brand, Geo. Babkirk, A. M. Babkirk, Robert Babkirk, Mrs. A. M. Almost Blind

Scrofula Affects the Eyes—Little Boy Treated by an Oculist Without Relief—But Now He Is Well.

"When my little boy was three months old his eyes became very sore and he was almost blind. I took him to an oculist who treated him for six months, and left him as bad as he was at the beginning. Finally Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I began giving it to him. In less than three weeks he was able to go into the sun without covering his eyes, and today his eyes are perfectly well, and his ears and nose, which were badly affected, are also well. Hood's Sarsaparilla has certainly done wonders for my boy." MRS. JAMES H. PAINTER, Amador, California. Remember

Dunbar District School.

Miss May E. White of Santa Rosa closed another successful term of school in the Dunbar District on Friday, December 10th. The exercises, which were enjoyed by a number of visitors and parents of the children, consisted of recitations, etc. The blackboards of the school were covered with artistic drawings in colors, the handiwork of the pupils. The patrons of the school appreciate Miss White's work as a teacher and she will no doubt be elected by the Trustees to teach another term.

WILL OF Wm. McPHERSON HILL

Entire Estate Left to the Widow of Deceased.

On Monday last the will of the late Wm. McPherson Hill was filed for probate in the Superior Court of this county. The deceased was for many years a resident of this valley, but when he sold his estate of 1700 acres to the State, which was converted into the Home for Feeble-Minded, he removed to San Francisco. The will reads as follows:

"I, William McPherson Hill of Sonoma Valley, Sonoma county, State of California, do hereby make this my olographic last will and testament.

"I give, devise and bequeath to my wife, Annie Elmer Hill, all my estate, property and effects, real and personal, and of every kind and description and wheresoever located, to have and to hold absolutely.

"I appoint my said wife executrix, and my son Robert Polter Hill, executor of this will without any bond or security from either of them.

WILLIAM McPHERSON HILL."

San Francisco, November 2d, 1896.

The will was certified to by John Thomas Scott. Accompanying the olographic will is a petition for letters testamentary of the will by Robert P. Hill. The petition states that the value of the estate does not exceed the sum of $15,000.

"The Index."

Thos. Glynn, formerly of this place, is now the manager of "The Index," 506 Market street, which is destined to become one of the most popular sample rooms in the city. Tommy is known to almost every business man in this valley and as his resort is on the way up town from the ferries his old Sonoma friends should not give him the go-by.

Lively Work.

The work of grading the First-street East extension was commenced in earnest last Monday by the contractor, Louis Breitenbach. Nineteen horses, twenty men, two scrapers, six wagons and one dump cart were engaged in the work on that day.

Christmas Meats.

Henry Hartin, proprietor of the Central Market, makes his usual display of Christmas meats this season. He exhibits, among other things, an 800 pound stall-fed steer and a porker that tips the scales at 710 pounds.

The Firemen's rag masquerade ball on New Year's Eve is being looked forward to with much pleasure by the party-going people of this valley.

Wm. Hope, who recently returned from Trinity county, brought back with him a three-year-old pet deer, which he has presented to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Engler as a Christmas present.

Louis Breitenbach will start in next week recurbing and widening the sidewalk on First-street West, between Napa and Spain streets, to a uniform width of twelve feet. This will be a great improvement to that part of town.

ALMOST A BIG FIRE.

SONOMA HAS ANOTHER VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

Prompt Action of the Firemen Averts Great Loss of Property.

Fire! fire! fire! This alarm, accompanied by the rapid taping of the fire bell, brought out Sonoma's entire population at 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon (Friday.)

A defective chimney in the Adler building, occupied by F. Grossarn, at the corner of Napa street and First-street East, caused the disturbance. Smoke was discovered issuing from the walls and windows of the building and the fire firemen were immediately on the scene with hook and ladder truck and engine. The hook and ladder truck was made fast in less than five minutes from the time the bell was struck and a stream was being poured into the building. A number of the firemen made their way in through a rear window and the interior of a closet beside the defective flue was found [illegible]. The [illegible] were broken in so that the [illegible] A hole was [illegible] through the roof and the ceiling well saturated with water. In a few minutes all danger was over.

The building in which the fire originated is owned by [illegible], and but for the flames [illegible] great loss would have been the result, as it is doubtful whether the firemen could have saved Hotz's store and other adjoining structures.

No serious damage was done.

X-MAS PRESENTS.

GLEN ELLEN ITEMS.

Mrs. Harper, W. J. Ping and Miss Jennie Ping spent a few days in the city this week.

The cold weather still continues, the thermometer being as low as 24 degrees above zero several mornings.

The young people of this place are making preparations for a good time dance at Mervyn Hall on New Years' night.

A series of entertainments are to be given at the California Home New Years' week. The proceeds will go to the benefit fund.

E. J. Phillips has advertised a turkey shoot and raffle for the 24th and 25th. The affair will be held opposite the Mervyn Hotel and will be conducted in a sportsmanlike manner.

Sunday evening the quiet and peace of Kenwood was greatly disturbed by the roamings of a tramp, well under the influence of liquor. With some little difficulty he was arrested and placed in charge of Constable Beatty of this place. The prisoner was taken before Judge Gibson Tuesday morning, and upon pleading guilty was sentenced to serve sixty days in the County Jail.

WHAT IS BEING SAID

Pointers Secured by Our Man Around Town.

That the turkeys are getting it in the neck this week.

That "there will be a hot time in the old town to-night."

That the best present Santa Claus could give Sonoma City would be light and water.

That bachelor Mayor Seipp hung up his stocking last night and got a hole in it.

That Granville Harris threw his "baleful eyes" around when someone said hey there!

That there's one on Henry Bates. What country does he like best during the holidays?

That nearly every body in town is calling out for more "kivers" these cold, frosty mornings.

That two sleepers have been added to the S. F. & N. P. Railway—Clem. Schuster and T. Dewey.

That mine host Harrison of the Mervyn Hotel, Glen Ellen, is the jolliest landlord in Sonoma county.

That if you want a Christmas turkey don't forget to attend E. J. Phillip's shooting match at Glen Ellen to-day.

That Vernon Goodwin forgot something at the school exercises last Friday afternoon. That his oversight was remarkable.

That the cold snap of the past week has caused Bob. Pasch, S. Schocken and H. H. Granice, who intended to go to the Klondyke next spring, to change their minds.

That the guest of honor at the next Firemen's banquet will not be an expelled member of the company who was fired out for non-payment of dues and fines to the amount of $11.25.

That Chief Poppe of the Fire Department showed a woeful lack of judgment at yesterday's fire. That if his orders had been obeyed the principal business block in the town would have went up in flames.

That Henry Weyl has kicked out of the traces of the electric light company because Granice is a stockholder and Julius Fochetti will receive a salary of $50 per month for services that are cheap at $75.

That the people of El Verano are kicking like Texas steers because the Southern Pacific Company has been given preference over the farmers in that part of the valley in the matter of road work. That Frank Riser, the farm manager of the P. I. Company, has a man and team engaged in doing work for the county. That this work ought to be given out to the poor farmers who have located on the Southern Pacific's lands in that vicinity, and not to the rich, grasping corporation.

A Kenwood Sensation.

Kenwood had a sensation Sunday evening. About 8 o'clock a tramp, who had recently been discharged from an insane asylum, went to the residence of Alex Westrup and asked for a blanket. Mrs. Westrup was alone with her little daughter, Mr. Westrup being at that time in church, where he went to perform his duties as organist. Mrs. Westrup gave the man the blanket asked for and the fellow went away. Afterwards he came back and used very severe and threatening language. Mrs. Westrup ordered him to leave the house, which he did, but returned again and became more abusive than ever.

Thoroughly frightened Mrs. Westrup took her husband's revolver and fired several times to alarm the neighbors, thinking they would come to her assistance. Nobody coming she locked the doors and ran to the church where her husband was, and very quickly he and several other men ran to the Westrup place. They found the man in the yard, and after a hard struggle he was overpowered, tied up with ropes and taken to Glen Ellen. The affair caused great excitement in the town.

Christmas Festivities.

Wednesday afternoon the Sunday School children of the M. E. Church had their Christmas tree. Many toys and handsome presents were showered upon the little ones by the never-failing Santa Claus and the afternoon was a joyful one for all.

The Congregational Sunday School children celebrated Christmas yesterday afternoon. Their Christmas tree was loaded down with gifts and the afternoon was a success in every way.

This morning at 10 o'clock Rosewig's Mass in G will be sung at St. Francis' Church. The choir, under the directorship of Mrs. Lucia Walliser, is composed of Messrs. J. H. Seipp, Ascanio Catalani, Mesdames. Emparan and Haraszthy and Miss Thomas. The church has been elaborately decorated for the occasion and the resident pastor, Father Quill, has prepared an able and appropriate sermon.

Albert Chance of Battle Mountain, Nevada, is visiting his aunt, Grandma Cook. This is the first time the old lady has ever met her nephew, who is delighted with the climate of Sonoma Valley.

Wilmer Thompson of Santa Rosa will leave shortly for Patterson, New Jersey, where he has accepted a responsible position. Mr. Thompson attended some of the cotillions here this season and is very popular with the younger set.

Miss Eugenie Berges and Miss Alice Chassagne took a prominent part in the invitation ball of La Ligue d' Henry IV, held at Native Sons' Hall in San Francisco last week. Both young ladies are well-known in this valley, where they spent last Summer.

Miss Elsie Appleton pleasantly entertained a number of her friends at a candy pull Wednesday night. The informality of the gathering and the hearty cheer of the young hostess went to make up a delightful evening. Music, dancing and games were participated in and refreshments were served.

Commencing next Monday a series of entertainments will be inaugurated at the California Home for the benefit of the X-mas fund for the feeble-minded children. Talent from home and abroad will contribute their efforts to this worthy cause and the series will close with an orchestral concert under the directorship of H. G. Maxwell.

Percy King and J. Bien will participate in "Columbia," the fete to be given for the benefit of the Childrens' Hospital in San Francisco on January 1st. Mr. King, one of San Francisco's society men, paid frequent visits to the country home of his parents, near this place, during the past summer. Mr. Bien will be remembered as the talented basso who sang in the role of Bacchus at the Vintage Festival.

The charitably inclined would do well to assist the destitute family who reside on the Webb place on Broadway. They are utterly without means and the father lies dangerously ill in a San Francisco hospital with typhoid fever. In order to protect her children from the intense cold of the past few nights the mother has been obliged to give her scanty bed covering to them. Let all give what they can to this needy and deserving family.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. HE WAS HOMESICK.

SO HE WAS EASILY LURED ACROSS THE MEXICAN LINE.

How an Amateur Detective Outwitted an Embezzler—Posing as a Forger In Exile Who Knew of a Rich Deposit of Ore That Had Never Been Reported.

"I never was in Mexico but once, and then I went as an amateur detective," said the mining expert. "It happened this way: A friend of mine in Pittsburg had his confidential clerk—to whom he had given an opportunity by trusting him fully—skip with $10,000. He knew where he was, just over the border from San Diego. But he was safe, for he kept religiously on the wrong side of the line. Several detectives had been sent down there to lure him over, but in some way he had detected the detective in them, for they often acquire a professional air in spite of their best efforts to the contrary.

"I knew that my only chance would be to go and live there as a fugitive from justice myself and so secure his entire confidence. I decided to be a forger. I took up my abode in the wretched little town and in about 24 hours was so sick of it that I was on the point of throwing up the whole scheme and going back. But my friend had done me many a favor in business, and in decency I owed him some return. Of course I did not make the slick man's acquaintance. I was determined he should make mine. He held off for several days, evidently thinking I was a detective and expecting me to make, as they had always done, approaches to him. But I kept away, as if I were suspicious of him. The fellow was dreadfully homesick, and I don't wonder, in that place. He used to go out on the desert and look at the stars and stripes across the border and wish he dared go back. He evidently began to think he was worse imprisoned than if he had been in some penitentiary.

"Finally one day he ventured to address me. I replied very coldly to his salutation, which only made him the more anxious to know me. He began to inquire into my business and find out what I had come for. I gave him no special satisfaction until one day I said that I had come for a change of air. With the same kind of air in the United States a few miles away this was, of course, absurd, and he concluded, as I intended he should, that I was there for the same reason he was, but I plied him with no questions. Finally, in his impatience, he burst out with:

" 'What's the use of keeping up this pretense longer? I know and you know that we are both on the same errand down here. It is true, as you say, we can't live over there'—pointing toward the country over the border. 'Let's own up and have done with the farce.' So we confessed to each other, he telling me all about his crime, which I knew already, and I telling him all about my imaginary iniquity.

"That was as far as we got for awhile, but it did him good. For it left him free to talk. He was very homesick, and we both acknowledged that it would be almost pleasanter to give ourselves up and serve out our terms than to stay there the rest of our lives. I once or twice hinted that I was ready to do so. But he wasn't, and I knew that no ordinary inducement would get him where he could be taken. But he had no opportunity of investing his money, and his cupidity naturally forced him to see that he had made a very poor bargain if all he was to get out of his rascality was to sit and spend it slowly in that little hole of a Mexican town.

"I had already interested him with my stories of fortunes that had been made in lucky mine investments, and told him I knew of one rich deposit which I had never reported to any one, intending to invest the amount of my forgery in its development if I could get some more to put with it. I told him it was in an out of the way locality in southern Arizona, and that we could get there without detection if we would go on foot or burro back and avoid the railroads. Finally he concluded that he was willing to take the risk if I would and go and look at the property. The rest was easy. I wrote at once for an officer to be ready to head us off while crossing the Colorado river. We had traveled some distance without being challenged or exciting suspicion. I threw off my pretended apprehension, declared that we were safe from all interference and that we might as well take it easy. This proved contagious, and I saw that I would have no difficulty in getting him to the point I had designated to the officers.

"We were riding slowly along in the hot sun of the desert when suddenly from behind a butte two men on horses shot out and rode swiftly toward us and were upon us almost before we had time to realize it. Although I had expected them, I confess I was taken by surprise—it was done so quickly and successfully. Of course they handcuffed me as well as him. But before we had reached the railroad station they had released me, and he understood how he had been fooled. I expected he would burst out in curses and reproaches, especially when they confiscated what he had left of his stealings. But he didn't. In fact, it was so great a relief that he made no defense at the trial and took his sentence with great indifference. I would hardly have been surprised if he had thanked me for the favor—he was so thoroughly sick of exile."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A sea captain has found that the sails of a ship when filled with a number of small holes bear it along more rapidly than when they are perfectly whole. He says that an ordinary sail cannot receive the full force of the wind, owing to the bulk of stationary air that fills up the hollow of the concave canvas.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. ONE WOMAN'S WIT.

It Came In a Flash and Saved Her Husband Disgrace.

In the waiting room of the railroad station at the foot of Montgomery street, Jersey City, sat a well dressed elderly man and woman, people of evident respectability. They had just arrived on an incoming train. They were waiting to make arrangements for the transfer of their baggage to this city. Beside the man was a gripsack labeled "Weaver, Hamilton, Canada." Finally the man, who appeared to be extremely nervous, arose and started toward the smoking room. As he did so a little old man, attired as a granger, and who had sparkling gray eyes, which were not even concealed by the glasses he wore, grabbed the man by the coat collar. The man turned pale.

"What do you mean?" he asked of the old fellow.

"I mean that you've been smuggling opium into the United States," said the old fellow. "I'm a detective." And he showed his badge.

He ran his hand up under the other man's coat, at the back and, after fumbling about, produced several bottles and packages.

"There's the proof," said he. "I've been watching you ever since we crossed the border, at Niagara Falls, and I thought there was something wrong. I don't know what to do in this case. Do you know that I could send you to state's prison for this?"

The derelict's lips quivered and he looked pleadingly at the elderly woman, his wife. Tears flashed to her eyes. Finally, she said, hesitatingly:

"You're quite wrong, sir. That is consumption medicine. My husband has long been endeavoring to conceal the fact from me that he is a victim of consumption. Just before we left Canada he had his life insured for my benefit, unknown to me, he thought. I have known of his deception and whenever he has left me, on the cars, I knew that he desired to seclude himself to take the medicine."

There were tears in the eyes of those standing about, and finally the detective murmured a few incoherent words and departed.

The elderly man and woman boarded a ferryboat and then a Ninth avenue elevated railroad train. A reporter, who had witnessed the waiting room scene, sat behind them in the car.

Neither of them spoke a word until they were well up town. Then said the man to his wife:

"Mary, how could you lie so? How came you to think of such a story?"

"John, I could and would die to save you disgrace. But for the land's sake don't be tempted again," said she.—New York Commercial.

INDIA RUBBER.

Tests by Which the Quality of the Material May Be Established.

Some few years ago Lieutenant Vladimiroff of the Russian navy made a series of experiments to establish the testing of rubber goods on a sound and satisfactory basis, the following being the main conclusions at which he arrived. It will be seen that the tests advocated are physical ones, as he came to the conclusion that chemical testing gave no reliable results.

First.—India rubber should not give the slightest sign of superficial cracks on being bent to an angle of 180 degrees after five hours' exposure in a closed air bath to a temperature of 125 degrees C. The test pieces should be about 6 centimeters thick.

Second.—Rubber containing not more than 50 per cent by weight of metallic oxides should stretch to five times its length without breaking.

Third.—Pure caoutchouc free from all foreign matter, except the sulphur necessary for its vulcanization, should stretch seven times its length without breaking.

Fourth.—The extension measured immediately after rupture should not exceed 12 per cent of the original length of the test piece. The test pieces should be from 3 to 12 millimeters wide, and not more than 6 millimeters thick and 8 centimeters long.

Fifth.—The percentage of ash gives a certain indication of the degree of softness, and may form a basis for the choice between different qualities for certain purposes.

Any excesses of sulphur over that required for vulcanization should be removed at the works, and should not appear on the surface of any object.

Now, these tests on the whole seem very well calculated to give useful indication to engineers as to the quality of the goods they are buying, only we would interpolate here the remark that unless a good price is paid for the rubber it is no use submitting it to such physical tests as these. India rubber substitutes made from oil and "recovered rubbers"—that is, old rubber worked up again with oil—have nothing like the elasticity appertaining to new, sound rubber, and they are quite incapable of standing the elongation or heat tests mentioned.—Engineering.
